T Nguyen provided a summary of the Faculty & Staff IDI results, highlighting the Intercultural Development Continuum. She asked attendees to provide suggestions on: (1) realistic goals for moving forward and (b) institutional changes that you would like to make at CSON in order to create a more culturally competent environment. Below are some of the responses from faculty:

J. Shindul-Rothschild suggested that it is too early for us to determine realistic goals. It will be helpful to know what an looks like, before we can make any meaningful determinations.

We should share IDI results with students

Have more theme weeks and diversity campaigns to promote awareness (i.e.

Create or promote more service learning opportunities

Host more social and cultural events to celebrate differences

Recognize more cultural holidays throughout the semester

Coordinate more events for student to connect and learn about each other

Encourage faculty members to collaborate on lesson planning and teaching classes together to co-facilitate conversations on cultural competency.

Some felt that the IDI had a strong emphasis on race. A suggestion was made to incorporate more social identifiers into future conversations around diversity and inclusion.
